History: International perspective

- In 1955 the department of Water Resources Development and Management (WRDM) was established as an Asian African Centre to honour India's commitment at the Asian African Conference held in Bandung.

- WRDM and the Department of Hydrology run special postgraduate programmes for students of the Afro Asian region.

- These departments has so far trained over 3000 in service engineers and agricultural scientists from 55 countries.

- The courses offered by the Department of Hydrology are presently sponsored by the Government of India and the UNESCO.

- The tradition of being a major educational hub in training students from Asia and Africa is sustained by IIT Roorkee in recent times also. Among IITs, Roorkee hosts most international students.
